

SAHRIS OBJECT PDF REPORT

Object Code: 83/113

Quantity: 1.00

Cultural Association:

Maker:

Production Place:

Description:

A laryngeal probe is a useful tool in a variety of airway procedures. The probe is used to inspect for new growths and ulcerations as well as the consistency of the airway tissue. The blunted end of the probe ensures minimal tissue damage during the inspection. Straight and angled probes are available depending on surgical need, c. 1930.

Provenance:

Cape Medical Museum