

SAHRIS OBJECT PDF REPORT

Object Code: 83/177

Quantity: 1.00

Cultural Association:

Maker:

Production Place:

Description:

Forceps were designed for use by general practitioner obstetricians, having the safety feature of an inability to reach high into the pelvis. Obstetricians now use these forceps most commonly in cesarean section delivery where manual traction is proving difficult. The short length results in a lower chance of uterine rupture, c. 1950.

Provenance:

Cape Medical Museum